

Rules and Insets

A paragraph of body text, long enough that it must break across more than one line, so the measure the rest of the document is set in is on the page to compare against.

An admonition whose content runs to several lines, because where those lines break is decided by the inset on the right as much as by the one on the left, and a right inset that is missing is invisible in any admonition short enough to fit on a single line.

Table 1. A monospaced column beside a plain one

Action	Key
Find in file	Ctrl+F
Save the file	Ctrl+S
Insert code	Ctrl+E

Table 2. A table whose frame the theme sets apart from its grid

Construct	Count
Paragraphs	12
Lists	3
Tables	2

A sidebar

A sidebar whose last line sits one padding above the block’s own bottom edge, with nothing between the two.

The closing paragraph, under a thematic break the theme gives a colour of its own.